The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

INVENTORY SALE

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

"We Go The Distance For You"

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

Building Vs. Bridge

The Empire State Building Construction Vs. The Sagaponack Bridge Repair

By Dan Rattiner

Perhaps the grandest construction in the City of New York is the Empire State Building. Perhaps the humblest construction in the Hamptons is the old wooden bridge that crosses the Long Island Rail Road tracks in Sagaponack. Everybody knows where the Empire State Building is. Signs point to it, colored lights illuminate it at night.

Practically nobody knows where the old wooden bridge is in Sagaponack. Ask people about the Sagaponack Bridge and they presume it is the bridge south of Montauk Highway, the Sagg Bridge on Bridge Lane for which Bridgehampton was named.

It isn't.

The Sagg Bridge spans 140 feet of Sagg Pond and is made of white concrete. The Sagaponack Bridge is north of the Montauk Highway, past the Wolffer Estates, and is smaller. Its wooden beams take it just 90 feet over the Long Island Railroad tracks.

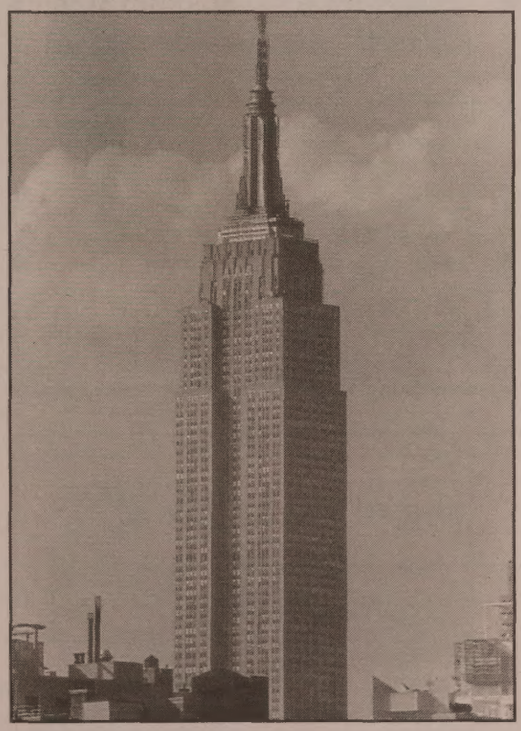
At least it did. On June 29, 2001, a small brush fire along the banks of this bridge, perhaps ignited by sparks from a passing train, set fire to the bridge. Though the fire trucks got there quickly and in short order had it out, the wooden posts had been charred and the roadbed had had holes punched in it. Because of the holes, cars could no longer pass across it. Because of the charring, the bridge was declared by the Southampton Town Fire Marshal to be too weak to be repaired. It would have to be replaced. Until its completion, the residents just north of the bridge, attempting to get to the Montauk Highway and the outside world, would have to take a long, inconvenient detour of four miles to Narrow Lane and Old Farm Road that passes under an old railroad overpass.

January 22, 1930, was the date when the construction of the Empire State Building began.

January 22, 1930, therefore, and June 29, 2001, the date of the fire, are two important dates in the history of the Hamptons and the history of New York City. They mark, respectively, the first day in the construction of a humble bridge in Sagaponack and the first day of the construction of what was to become, in Manhattan, the tallest building in the world.

DAY ONE

The ink is signed on a contract in Manhattan



between the owner of the property, John Jacob Raskob, the architectural firm of Shreve, Lamb & Harmon and the construction company Starrett Brothers & Eken, Inc. with Mayor Jimmy Walker looking on. A band plays and a crowd cheers. With that a wrecking ball begins to knock down the old Waldorf-Astoria Hotel at the corner of 34th Street and Fifth Avenue, the site of the future Empire State Building.

Members of the Southampton Highway Department, the New York State Department of Transportation and the Long Island Railroad schedule a meeting to discuss what to do about the re-building of Sagaponack Bridge.

DAY THIRTY

Construction workers in Manhattan complete the demolition of the Waldorf Astoria and begin to dig a big hole in the ground for the foundation of the Empire State Building.

The State, the Town and the Railroad meet and wrangle about who should take responsibility for what in the construction of the Sagaponack Bridge. It is decided that a bridge construction company be contacted and asked for a bid.

DAY SIXTY

In Manhattan, the framework for the foundations are laid four stories below ground level. The concrete is poured in and the framework is broken away.

In Southampton, the Town Highway Department receives a set of plans and a bid from a construction company for the creation of the new Sagaponack Bridge. Another meeting is held to discuss who will pay what proportion of the cost, which has been bid at $1.7 million.

DAY NINETY

Construction workers are busy placing the huge steel girders in place for the building of the massive ground floor of the building. The steel, 60,000 tons of it, is being brought in by barge, train and trucks from the steel mills of Pennsylvania. The builder announces that the estimated cost of the building, $24,718,000, will be within budget and on schedule.

At a meeting between the State Transportation Department, the Town of Southampton and the Long Island Railroad, it

East Hampton fashion designer Betsey Johnson is a good person to know. Her recent collection at Fashion Week showed lots of brightly colored fiesta skirts and lacy bra tops and Barbie doll shoes, the whole thing called "Betseyville" which she says is inspired by her purchase of this little hotel she recently bought in Zihuatanejo, Mexico.

If you wondered what happened to Michael Sagman, the party hearty group house director in Barbara Kopple's documentary "The Hamptons," he has joined the posse of Cameron Douglas, Michael Douglas' son, bacheloring around Manhattan enjoying the party scene. Better there than here.

If you are getting into pr trouble in Manhattan, go see Howard Rubinstein. If you are getting into pr trouble in the Hamptons, get lawyer Ed Burke Jr., who represents trouble in court. Burke and restaurateur Jeff Resnick (of Sen) will shortly open a new restaurant on Main Street, Sag Harbor called Jeff and Eddie's. Will Howard Rubinstein hold court there weekends?

These included the late Alan Lomax, the early blues music collector who with his dad traveled Appalachia with a primitive early tape recorder in the 1930s, the late Tito Puente, Latin music pioneer and Paul Simon of Montauk, who appeared together for the first time in a decade with his former partner Art Garfunkle to entertain the crowd.

A strange development in an auto death case in the Hamptons involves a recent arrest in Charleston, South Carolina of Greg Kotke. Kotke, 36, is the man who allegedly met real estate agent Leslie Jennemann at a party in Sag Harbor last November, went with her – he in his car, she in hers – toward his house and on the way she weaved off the road and hit and killed a farm worker named Henry Yarell walking down the street there. Kotke was arrested January 30 in Charleston and charged with assaulting a homeless man who was panhandling there. He is a prime witness to Jennemann having hit Yarrell. A reliable witness?

is decided that the bid to build the new bridge should be rejected. Instead, the bridge will be rebuilt by men from the Long Island Railroad laborers union. The cost is estimated at $277,000. The LIRR agrees to contribute $240,000 since the bridge is on their property. The town agrees to pay the remaining $37,000. The cost of the repairs to Sagaponack Road leading up to the bridge will also be borne by the town, which sets aside $65,000 for that work.

DAY ONE HUNDRED TWENTY

Workmen at the Empire State Building construction site complete the steel up to the eighth floor. The building will rise to an observation tower on the one hundred and second floor with a dirigible mast going higher than that. The total height of the Empire State Building will be 1,250 feet. More than 37 million cubic feet of concrete will be used. The building will exceed the height of the reining tallest building in the world, the Chrysler Building on Lexington Avenue, by 204 feet.

In Southampton, the Town Planning Department approves the drawings submitted by the Long Island Railroad for the new bridge. Next month, the Town Board, if all goes well, will issue a building permit.

DAY ONE HUNDRED FIFTY

Throughout Manhattan, people can look up and see workers in hardhats, bearing welding torches, assembling the great steel beams of the new building at a rate of almost 4 1/2 stories per week. The beams are brought up in slings and steel cables by huge construction cranes. The Empire State Building is up to the thirty-first floor.

In Southampton, a building permit is issued by the Southampton Town Board to the Long Island Rail Road for the construction of a new wooden bridge.

DAY ONE HUNDRED EIGHTY

The Empire State Building is now constructed up to the fifty-fifth floor. On the ground floor, the masonry, limestone from Indiana, is commenced to be placed, the panels separated by steel strips.

The charred remains of the old railroad bridge have been torn down by workmen with sledge hammers, wrecking balls and crowbars.

DAY TWO HUNDRED TEN

Work slows a bit on the upper floors of the Empire State Building as it takes longer to get material hauled up there. Still, the steel framework for the building is completed up through the observation deck on the eighty-fourth floor. The masonry is completed through the fortieth floor.

The twelve-inch wooden posts and crossbeams arrive on several railroad flatbed cars at the site of the bridge and are unloaded.

DAY TWO HUNDRED FORTY

The Manhattan building, as a partially-clad steel skeleton, rises to its full height. A ceremony is held at which former New York Governor Alfred E. Smith places the cornerstone masonry at the ground floor level at Fifth Avenue and 34th Street.

Sixteen concrete footings are poured in specially marked spots crossing the railroad tracks in Sagaponack. The posts go in and are bolted into place.

DAY TWO HUNDRED SEVENTY

Workers top off the Empire State Building one hundred and two stories above the streets of Manhattan. Decorative artwork, friezes, gargoyles and sculpture are bolted in place along the sides of the top of the building, an art deco wonder made of steel, glass and aluminum 200 feet high resembling the nose of a rocket ship.

The wooden framework for the bridge in Sagaponack is completed and the wooden decking has arrived and is being hammered into place.

DAY THREE HUNDRED

All the masonry work on the sides of the Empire State Building is completed. The interior floors and walls are nearing completion. On many floors, tenants have begun to move in. The building towers triumphantly over the city.

A hot tar sub base is applied to the wooden decking of the new bridge at Sagaponack.

DAY THREE HUNDRED AND THIRTY

Mayor Jimmy Walker cuts a ribbon out front of the Empire State Building to commemorate the completion of the tallest building in the world. He announces that the interiors and the final exterior touches, including the dirigible mast at the very top, will soon be completed. The first expected dirigible, the Akron, is scheduled to arrive within two weeks.

A Terrible Way To Die

Highway Department Man Is Killed by Giant Eel In Noyac's Trout Pond

By Dan Rattiner

The blizzard that struck the Hamptons last week caused no deaths or serious injuries out here because of the efforts of all concerned to quickly clean up after it. The power lines held, no trees were uprooted, the streets were cleared in record time and the total disruption, from a storm that was the third biggest snowstorm in the past one hundred years, lasted little more than a day.

On the other hand, a week later, it appears that there was one casualty in the aftermath of the storm, a man named Harold Ketcham, Jr. from South Orange, New Jersey, who was out here as part of the community snowplow effort cleaning up the mess.

"Ketcham, driving an International Harvester 10-foot, power-angle snowplow owned by South Orange Township, was one of seven trucks sent by South Orange as part of our Neighbor Towns Helping Each Other (NTHEO) effort, Hamptons Council member Artie Benson said. "The storm had abated in that township, the snow had been removed, and these seven township-owned trucks were driven out here by their drivers to help our effort, which was still underway.

"Seven came out, only six came back. But it took them awhile to figure out that Ketchum and the International Harvester snowplow were missing. They thought he had gone visiting his Aunt Bertha in Belmar."

They found three tires on the shore with giant teeth marks in them, and they found a fourth tire nearby, partially eaten.

Ketcham, 38, who lives alone in a second floor apartment above a South Orange soda shop, was apparently very close to his Aunt Bertha Ketcham whom he visited frequently. But frantic phone calls to her three days after the clean-up revealed he never stopped there. Thus an investigation was begun.

Ketcham, on Monday night, had been given the task of plowing Noyac Road eastward from the intersection of Roses Grove Road. He had gone off, and people had seen him, plowing past the Noyac Golf Club toward Trout Pond. He was last seen, apparently, helping a woman plow a driveway on Locust Lane just across from the Noyac Schoolhouse, a fact the police learned in a door-to-door survey along the route.

"I saw this yellow snowplow coming down the street. It had South Orange, New Jersey, on the side, which I remember because I have a brother who lives in East Orange," the woman, Hattie Jane Crowley, said. "I waved at him, and he saw I was having trouble with the shovel and he just took a swipe at it with his big blade, it was really nice of him, and he smiled and waved. I remember he had a thin moustache. Then he drove off."

The police, who had begun their investigation on Friday afternoon, four days after the storm, didn't expect much at first. They learned that the route he had been expected to plow would take him past Trout Pond, then south on Stony Hill Road, east on Brick Kiln Road and then to the firehouse, just east of where Brick Kiln meets the Bridgehampton-Sag Harbor Turnpike across from the entrance to Mashashimuet Park for coffee and donuts. He never arrived.

"We believe he was told about the troubles up at Trout Pond," Hampton Police Chief Nick Pasta said. "But we're not absolutely sure."

As everyone knows, a giant eel, believed to be an Ecuadorian Eel thirty-feet long, leaped up through the ice of Trout Pond two weeks ago and wrapped itself around a hunter crossing the ice with the intention of pulling him back down into the water with him. Only the quick thinking of a delivery man, who was parked nearby, saw the incident unfold, and distracted the eel saved the man.

But Ketcham apparently DID stop at Trout Pond. Around six a.m. that Tuesday morning, with the snow finally stopped, police learned, checking their 911 records, that Arthur Roberts, age 19, and his girlfriend Brenda Willoughby, age 18, had gone out in Roberts' four-wheel drive 1999 Jeep Cherokee to see the winter wonderland as dawn rose. They stopped at Trout Pond.

"We were parked there about twenty minutes, facing the pond," Roberts said. "We had been warned to stay away from Trout Pond and that there would be no ice skating there, but we thought we'd take a chance and just go look at it. It was a thrill, I guess. Anyway, facing the pond, we saw the hole in the ice from the two weeks before, or at least that is what we thought it was. But we did think it was a very big hole, not so small as the one described when the hunter almost got pulled in, and the pieces of ice around it seemed fresh. Like it had just happened.

"And then from under the water we heard this PTUI sound, like somebody spitting something, and then there was this big truck tire flying through the air from out of the hole. It landed in the snow on the banks of the pond. Then there was another PTUI and another truck tire. And then I got out of there. And we called the police on the cell phone."

The police came but apparently did not see the tires which had apparently sunk deep into the snow bank. The town was still in an emergency situation from the storm with police and plows everywhere and as nobody was at the pond at all, except for the hole in the ice, they walked around for a minute or two and then left.

It wasn't until three days later, on Friday, when South Orange reported one of their trucks missing, that the police went back again to look. They had remembered the 911 call.

The snow had melted. They found three tires on the shore with giant teeth marks in them, and they found a fourth tire nearby, partially eaten, also with teeth marks in it. They concluded that the eel had yanked down the International Harvester with Mr. Ketham inside. They took the tires back to police headquarters.

"These were forty-four-inch Michelin snow tires model D45, about half the tread worn off, and we called South Orange and found out that they matched what was put on that truck about a year ago. It's them," Chief Pasta said.

Beginning that Friday afternoon, therefore, Chief Pasta ordered a round-the-clock surveillance of the pond. The next morning, Saturday, they were rewarded with the spare tire of an International Harvester, which came flying out of the hole in the pond, up into the air about a hundred feet and then down on the shore about fifty feet from Officer Marshall Madison, who was sitting in his police car on the surveillance watch reading Newsday. He saw what he thought was a flying saucer come flying out of the hole and then heard it land in the dirt and bounce off into the woods not far from the passenger side of his car. But he didn't hear a PTUI sound.

Police are currently trying to engage a helicopter service to try to pull the International Harvester away from the eel and out through the hole in the ice, now thin and soft and no longer safely negotiable by man or machine, so they can retrieve what they expect to be the remains of the mustachioed Harold Ketcham, Jr. So far, however, they've had no takers. •

An eBay Story

In Search Of The Grundig Satellit 6001 That Beat The Zenith Transoceanic

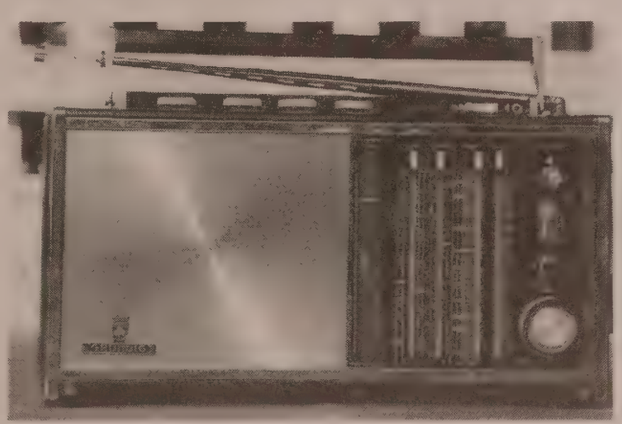
By Dan Rattiner

This is an Ebay-Internet story. It begins on Monday morning when I opened my bedroom closet and stared, once again, at all the crap on the floor that really, one day, I ought to do something about. There is a $300 Italian Borsalino straw hat in a box that somehow shrunk and is too small for me and which I really ought to have stretched one of these days. There are my favorite winter boots I wore for so many years that the soles are paper-thin and treadless and when I wear them out in the snow and ice I slip and slide all over. And there is this incredible suitcase-sized Grundig shortwave radio, all chrome and leather, that broke after many years use and which I just can't bring myself to throw away.

Anyway, I was downstairs going through my e-mail on my computer about a half hour later when I suddenly realized that the Internet could provide me with a solution that was delaying the repair of the Grundig radio.

I should tell you about this radio. It has enormous sentimental value to me. As you may know, I started Dan's Papers in 1960 when I was a college student. By 1968 I had married Pam and we had gone off to spend the winter in St. Croix. Dan's Papers was only published in the summertime in those days. We'd go away in November and come back in April, each time to a different part of the world. We did this for many years.

The year after we spent that time in St. Croix, for example, we headed off for the Canary Island of Tenerife. This is a remote place off the coast of Africa, and when we got there we found ourselves in, well, my wife was okay, but I found myself in enormous culture shock. The island, half the size of Long Island, is really just the tip of a giant undersea volcano. It rises out of the sea more than 10,000 feet. There had been recent eruptions when we got there in 1969. The whole island was volcanic rubble, with hardly a tree anywhere. And nobody knew any English.



The Grundig Satellit 6001

Anyway, we were in the only city on the island, Santa Cruz de Tenerife, a port city, population 300,000, and we were struggling to find anyone who could understand us and it occurred to me that, besides ourselves, we would need a friend. Where we were going was a fishing village with a black sand beach three hours away by taxi. There would be no newspapers in English, no paperback books in English, no TV, no radio, certainly no radio in English. In fact, the electricity went on only from 5 p.m. to midnight. The place was populated, besides the natives, with tourists, almost all German.

Somebody in Santa Cruz de Tenerife suggested that we should probably get a shortwave radio. We could get the Armed Forces Radio Network and listen to football games, we could get the BBC and listen to radio drama and the news, we could listen to all the political stations, Radio Cuba, Radio Moscow and Radio Free Europe. We could also listen to, if we wished, Christian missionary stations from all over the world.

I went to an electronics store and I bought the Grundig I am talking about. It worked off electricity. But it also worked off D batteries. It got AM, FM, 8 different shortwave bands and something called Long Wave, which was what Europe listened to before they switched over to FM. It weighed twenty pounds, but it had a handle. It was our lifeline to the world not only during our stay in Tenerife, but in later years in Aix en Provence in the south of France, Luquillo, Puerto Rico, Mazatlan, Mexico, Panajachel, Guatemala and Kihei, Maui, Hawaii.

By 1985 however, Dan's Papers was no longer just a summer publication. There was also a family of kids who had school and so our long-term winter travel days were over. As if on cue, the Grundig died. It developed a loud hum and became barely audible.

I took it in 1985 to Mike's TV up in Springs and Mike told me he couldn't do a thing with it unless I had a wiring schematic for it. I lacked a schematic. I put it in my closet.

Now, last Monday, sitting at my computer, it occurred to me I could do a search for the schematic. I dragged the radio out and inspected it. It was covered with dust. The model was Satellit 6001. I typed in the blank space where you order a search GRUNDIG SATELLIT 6001 SCHEMATIC and I waited. I got eleven sites, eight that did not include the word "schematic" and seemed to be for members of shortwave radio clubs, and three of which did include "schematic." The first two involved requests for schematics. The third took me to EBAY. There was, for auction, a GRUNDIG SATELLIT 6001, including manuals and schematics. There were five hours left on the bidding, and it was up to a hundred and sixty-two dollars but had not yet reached a "minimum required bid."

I briefly considered bidding on this. But then I thought if I got it, it wouldn't be this one, and this one is the one that's traveled all over the world. I wanted the schematic.

I sent an e-mail to the seller. Could he or she be so kind as to mail a copy of the schematic before shipping it out to the winner? I have a broken 6001 and that's what the repairman says I need.

Within the hour I got a reply. A Xerox of the schematic would be mailed in the morning. Glad to oblige.

I looked at the shortwave, sitting in front of me on my desk. Once, in the 1970s, a friend had bragged that he had just bought a new shortwave radio, a Zenith Transoceanic that Consumer Reports had deemed the most powerful in the world. Mine is more powerful, I told him. He brought his over and we put the two of them on the dining room table and it was no contest. The Grundig 6001 got everything and his got, relatively, zip.

And then I thought, looking at my dusty old broken radio, WHAT HAPPENS IF I PLUG IT IN?

I picked up the radio and took it over to a wall outlet, set it on a table nearby and plugged it in. It worked perfectly. Beautiful FM music came out of it, Beethoven, hum-free. It had healed itself. Amazing.

I had a good close look at this shortwave radio. Back then it seemed sort of normal, but in fact it was the most complicated thing imaginable. There were two station-changing dials, one on the front for the AM, FM and LW. The other on the side for the shortwave. When you turned either dial, the appropriate red needle moved on only THAT frequency indicator. There was a signal strength gauge. There was a switch called Bandspread. When you flicked it, a small part of the band width expanded to the full length of the radio. It was like a microscope, allowing better fine tuning. Most ingenious of all was a huge screw inside the radio, which you turned with a handle on the side and which ratcheted the shortwave bands into a viewable position one after another facing you. What an awesome thing.

I remember the day I bought this radio back in 1969 on Tenerife. It was a sunny day. The shop was run by a Spanish-speaking Pakistani, who told me in sign language that this was a brand new product just in and was by far the best. Outside, on the streets of the city, there were men walking around dressed as women, heavily rouged, talking in falsetto voices and embarrassing passersby. They were part of a parade celebrating a religious holiday that day. The parade marched everybody through various streets that the local police, rifles over their shoulders, had closed to traffic.

After listening to the Beethoven for a while, I tried the various shortwave bands. They all worked. There was the BBC and there were radio stations proselytizing Christianity and The Word of the Lord. But the political stations were gone. The Cold War is over. Democracy won. No Radio Cuba, no Radio Moscow, no Voice of America.

Later that day, the auction for the Grundig ended and by going back on EBAY I saw what it sold for. Two prospective buyers fought it out to the bitter end — it is all down there in the report — the final bid $484.50, coming just one minute and thirty seconds before the official end.

I await the schematic. Meanwhile, this classic occupies a prominent place in my living room overlooking Three Mile Harbor. •

Traffic Survey

Chances Are You Won't Be Able To Park In The Hamptons At All This Summer

By Dan Rattiner

It is during the middle of winter here in the Hamptons when decisions are made on how to handle the traffic problems during the upcoming summer. What we know so far this winter is that the practice of booting cars — putting metal handcuffs on the wheels so that the victim can't move — is being abandoned in East Hampton. Southampton and Sag Harbor Village are continuing this nefarious behavior. So beware. Cars parked in certain private parking lots will be locked up by the boot and if you don't pay the $135 fine in cash to the man on the spot, you will not be able to drive your car away. He will keep it locked up until you pay. If you never pay at all I don't know what would happen. So far, nobody has thought that their car, fully operational except for the boot, was worth less than $135.

Other attempts to deal with the traffic in our downtowns — some successful, some not so successful, all imaginative — have been reexamined. East Hampton Village will consider renewing the free bus shuttle program at their March 21 meeting. This bus, for several seasons, has gone around and around all day during the summer between the Lumber Lane Parking Lot, Guild Hall on Main Street, the traffic light in the center of the village and back again. Better signage on the sides of the bus in 2002 made it clearer where this bus goes. It goes around and around. Ridership has gone up.

Also successful in East Hampton have been the two-hour limit ticket machines at the entrances to the main public parking lots behind the stores. You pull up to the machine, press a button and it spits out a free ticket that you have to place on your dashboard, time and date stamp up. Recently approved was a repeat of the 2002 ticket-spitting machine schedule. That will be, again, between mid-May and December. The period from October to December created serious opposition last year when local merchants claimed it is a long walk to the Lumber Lane parking lot (where you can park all day) and in late autumn the walk is dark, cold, ill-lit and a bit intimidating. Nevertheless this period was approved.

I might note that most of the ticket machines, not in use during January, February, March and April, are each covered over with a black plastic garbage bag tied with a rope, mummy-style. But at the entrance driveway between Barefoot Contessa and the North Fork Bank, someone has gone to the trouble of making the machine there a smart, form-fitting black leather cover with a belt and a zipper. Our hats are off to whoever did this — a member of the Ladies Village Improvement Society, the owner of an upholstery company, Mr. Mayor in his spare time, or whoever. Well done.

Nobody in any of the other villages has anything like these ticket-spitting machines or the bus that goes around and around as they have in East Hampton, and nobody seems to have any other ideas either. It's fair to say that East Hampton has the worst parking problem.

These changes are being made necessary... by the fact that every year the auto industry makes about fourteen million new cars... but scraps only twelve million.

One big change you will note regarding parking out east on the North Fork will be in downtown Greenport. As you read this, the entire downtown main street of that community is all torn up. And when they are done, there will be LESS parking available on that street than there is now.

Nevertheless, the work is proceeding and after you learn about it you realize it is quite dramatic, stunning and well worth doing. The loss of parking and various other changes are com-

BREAKING NEWS

Sears Bellows Park, the 979-acre Pine Barrens park that is known for its beautiful trails and landscape, has been closed indefinitely. Located in Hampton Bays, Sears Bellows Park had to close due to budgetary problems and a lack of staff. This is the first time in the history of the state that a county park has been closed.

The decision to close was also based on the popularity of Indian Hill, another local park area. Park officers believe that proximity of Indian Hill will satisfy those looking for an ideal spot for outdoor activities but can no longer do so at Sears Bellows Park. Anyone who had made reservations for picnics or events at the county park in the future will receive the appropriate information and response from the park system in the mail. The park office can be reached at 852-8290 for further information.

First Baptist Church Of Bridgehampton Becomes The First Church For Peace

By Tarah Kennedy

"If President Bush, Vice President Cheney and Attorney General Ashcroft went on a sailboat for relaxation and suddenly their boat capsized, who would be saved?"

The Rev. Carlyle Turner posed this question halfway through the February 23 service at the First Baptist Church of Bridgehampton, but because of time constraints, he didn't wait for the congregation to answer him.

"The American people," he responded.

The assembly laughed in agreement, an appropriate response as the church has taken a public stand for peace against the potential war in Iraq. Not expecting to be hearing jokes during service, I remained open-minded, as this was my first time at a Baptist church.

But when the Praise Team began the service with the song, "I've Got a Feeling Everything's Going to be Alright," I also had a good feeling about what this church stood for. On the other hand, when I (literally) stood up to take another seat, one closer to the back so I could observe the full range of the scene before me, I was told to not move until the singers were done. "Strike one," I thought. I was already feeling a bit uncomfortable with being in the minority.

First Baptist Church in Bridgehampton

But in a place of worship, skin color should not matter, as it shouldn't anywhere else, and so it didn't as I followed the service, presented first by Turner, then Pastor Henry Faison, Jr., and finally, the Rev. Michael Jackson. Interlacing periods of prayer with songs from the Praise Team, and the Youth and Sunbeam Choir and a very responsive and outgoing audience, the community and spirituality of the church would be inspiring to any individual. Although the church itself was sparsely decorated, some of its female members made up for it by dressing in almost 1940s fashion, with stylish hats, big bows and bright outfits. Giving off the feeling of "Come as You Are," I found myself immersed in the church's acceptance.

Declaring itself the "First Church of Peace," First Baptist is going through a name change, though a temporary and unofficial one, according to Faison. About three weeks ago during services, he said he asked his congregation if anyone thought America should fight a war against Iraq. When not one hand was raised, Faison said it inspired him to unite his community. But Faison said he doesn't believe advocating peace is a conflict of interest between Church and State, because First Baptist isn't trying to change policy.

"The church has to be the consciousness of the community and of the nation," he said, further explaining that people should be free to express religious beliefs, as long as those beliefs don't lead people to commit illegal acts.

Reverend Henery Faison on the Pulpit

After demonstrating in the New York City protest on Februaury 15, as well as in Sag Harbor for two Sundays, Faison said he was voicing his opinion, as well as the church's. Other churches in the area have shown their support with him, such as the First Baptist Church in Cutchogue and the Unity Baptist Church in Mattituck, both of which are on the North Fork.

Faison also said that there are many churches in the Hamptons that have also made First Baptist aware that they are in agreement, although they haven't publicly said so.

I wasn't the only visitor this day, as newly elected Congressman Tim Bishop (D), former Provost at the Southampton College, attended the Sunday service, asking Faison beforehand if he could thank the congregation for their support. At the side podium, Bishop told the community that the war at home was more important than the one abroad, and that he wanted to be challenged, supported and asked for help by the people when they felt the need for it. He also said that he would be opening up an office in Southampton so that he would be more accessible.

After Bishop spoke, Faison paraphrased an issue raised by Jackson in which people complain about one another but don't use available resources to fix their problems. Explaining that as taxpayers, the community should voice their complaints to those who will listen, such as those in office.

"We have to make noise," said Faison in his sermon. "It's the squeaky wheel that gets the oil."

With two children in the military, his daughter in Germany with her family and his son recently discharged due to medical reasons, the war abroad is much closer to home for Faison.

But Faison said he believes the oil crisis is the enemy and not Saddam Hussein.

"Oil equals power," said Faison. "Cars, industries and homes run off this stuff, and it's scarce."

Faison said that if President Bush had the right reasons for declaring a war, Faison would stand behind him. But Faison said there is no logic behind the government's potential plan.

"New York is in a fiscal crisis," said Faison. "We have no money for anything, but we can finance a war that shouldn't be?"

Although Faison could be perceived to be controversial, I believe his intentions are pure. Although I was new to the church, I was welcomed with open arms. After the service, people introduced themselves, shook hands and seemed genuinely refreshed by the church's power. The open communication displayed by the church should be perceived as a role model for Americans.

Faison said that his hope is for people to ing about because of a serious problem on the street that could no longer be put off. The street, over the years, has been paved over and paved over so often that the hump in the middle of the street cannot drain the water off the street and into the gutters without spilling the water onto the sidewalks. There was nothing to be done but to tear the street up, dig down to the first layer and start over right on the original dirt.

This they have done. In doing so, however, they have addressed another problem, which is that the street is so narrow you cannot safely have two sidewalks, a row of parked cars at either gutter and two lanes down the middle. They HAVE had that, but they have also had people opening the doors of parked cars into oncoming traffic with the result that the door gets sheared off.

In May, when the roadwork is completed, the main street will reopen with only one row of parked cars, the row furthest from the docks. (Hey look, there's a view!) There will be more pedestrian space, more people, and, in the lot behind the stores on Front Street away from the docks, a new row of parking spaces that were not there before. With street furniture, this whole complex, designed by a city planner, will come out just fine.

Look for it when you go through Greenport. The Eighth Wonder of the World. Next perhaps they will install the long gone Third Wonder of the World — a fifty-foot tall statue, straddling the entrance to the harbor — of the Colossus of Rhodes.

All of these changes are being made necessary, of course, by the fact that every year the auto industry makes about fourteen million new cars for American roads, but scraps only twelve million of the old ones. It's simple mathematics. This practice, which led to the nefarious booting experiment in the Hamptons, is not limited to the U.S. In fact, in other parts of the world, it has inspired even more draconian measures.

Perhaps the most imaginative of these has just gone into effect in downtown London. Downtown London is worse than Manhattan. And so what they have done — and this went into effect last Thursday — is to require anyone wishing to take a car into downtown London to pay a fee. The fee is approximately nine dollars a day.

Here is how it works. You are driving along and as you approach downtown London, you will see a big letter C painted on the road. Signs will explain what this is. It stands for CONGESTED AREA AHEAD. If you continue on and take your car into the CONGESTED AREA, you will have to have paid the fee. Modern computer technology makes it possible.

You can pay the fee online on your computer, you can pay the fee by credit card by calling a number on your cell phone, or you can pull over the old-fashioned way and pay it to a man in a booth placed strategically along the side of the road.

No actual ticket is issued. Instead, your payment is registered in a computer database. Meanwhile all through downtown London there are, high up on telephone poles, TV surveillance monitoring devices that focus on the traffic on all the roads. These surveillance cameras read the license plate numbers of all the cars. They then compare these numbers to the database, which has the license plate numbers of all the cars of the people who have already paid the fee for the day. It comes up with a list of those who haven't paid. If the fee is not recorded "paid" by that evening, the computer automatically issues a fine of about a hundred and fifty dollars to the owner of the car that bears the offending license plate number. I don't know how they do this. But that is what they do.

This practice is off to a bad start. When the new system went into effect last Thursday, it was discovered that, a few days before, which was before the new law went into effect, numerous people had already been fined by this computer. There were, apparently, bugs in the system. Nevertheless, the mayor has ordered this project to run for two months. Then it will be reevaluated and a decision made whether to carry on. The system, if it works, is expected to generate about fifteen million dollars a year, said money to be used for public transportation. London's Mayor Ken Livingstone, has staked his administration's future on this. Meanwhile, Mayor Bloomberg is monitoring its progress. He is considering it for New York.

Of course it would be a piece of cake to put this into effect in the fabulous Hamptons. We have just two bridges that take cars over the Shinnecock Canal into this community. All we would need is two cameras. And the software from London.

We could fine every person who crosses the Shinnecock Canal with English license plates who fails to pay the fee.

Then we go after the French. • come together as a community and voice their opinion as that community.

"In America people shouldn't be viewed as unpatriotic for speaking out," said Faison. "We want government to see that there are people who aren't going to sit back and let government do anything they want without a challenge."

The Sheltered Islander

Observations of an Islander #237
"Lady of Spain, I adore you..."

For most people, "going with the flow" means taking it easy, don't panic no matter what happens, etc. This expression takes in a whole new meaning on Shelter Island.

While taking the 7:30 a.m. ferry from Greenport to Shelter Island last week, my dear brother related one of those special "going with the flow" island moments to me. The ferry was nearly to the mooring he said, maybe about ten feet from the first post. But the ice was so thick and the outgoing tide was so strong, the ferry was just carried away towards Orient Point. The ferry struggled over and over to find a path back through the out going pack ice and finally completed the nine-minute ferry ride in just under an hour. This is not an atypical event for winter here, so I thought I should share some calming information for anyone who is new or visiting on Shelter Island this winter.

There are six levels of alert for the ferries:

Code Green: The coast is clear, the weather is good, all aboard!

Code Gray: There is a thick fog, the pilot points the boat towards the opposite dock and goes very slowly. Ferry workers stand in front of the boat and throw fifteen-foot ropes with plum bobs out over and over and listen; if they hear the plum bob clang onto metal, they know they're fifteen feet from the other ferry. If they hear someone exclaim, "What the hell just hit me in the head?!?" they know they are ten feet from the other ferry. If they hear a windshield shatter, they know they are seven feet from the other ferry. With this failsafe system in place, there's very little danger of colliding in the fog.

Code Yellow: There is a bad rainstorm, the ferry workers are all in bright yellow rain gear. You will receive wet change for your ferry ticket. The tides will be high, you may have to gun your car and launch yourself off the boat onto the dock. Don't worry about stopping in these situations, the dock workers engage the bumper hook system which works just like a tail hook on an aircraft carrier to grab the rear end of your airborne car and help you land.

Code Orange: It's very cold, all the workers are in orange Carhart suits. The deck will be icy and you will have the opportunity to test your grace and virtue as you slide into other cars. It's simply a ferry fact, ride the ferries long enough and other people's car paint will appear on your car. Try to think of it as a way to meet new people.

Code Blue: It's absolutely freezing and miserable and several ferry workers have frozen to the railings till Spring. When you roll down your window to pay the ticket, please lean way over towards the passenger side so the ferry worker can stick the upper half of his or her body into the car for just a second of warmth. Help them uncurl their fingers so you can have your change. We all know to put our hands between our legs to get them warm while seated; you can offer this option to the ferry worker depending on how well you know them, or how much you need the ride.

Code Red: It's freezing cold and ice floes are breaking up and heading to sea with the outgoing tide, taking all ferries with them. Nothing can be done. A very serious condition. Please remember all ferries have a radio, so at least you can listen to your favorite station until you're out of range. The good news is, Spain is on the same latitude as New York. The ferry has the Berlitz "Learn Spanish As You Cross the Atlantic in Your Ferry" cassette tape series available for all passengers. Flamenco dancing lessons on the deck will help you keep warm. The castanets are very easy to work since your hands are already shaking from the cold. Additionally, as soon as you are in international waters, the casino and bar located on the bottom level of the ferry will be open to the public.

Madrid is lovely even in the winter and chance are, you'll meet a nice group of people from islands all up and down the northeast coast of America. The ferries just tie up at the docks and wait for a tow back from any oil tanker heading east. The capper is, the ferry companies don't charge you extra for the trip. I mean think of it... getting to Europe for nine bucks... is this a great country or what?

The Long Island Railroad completes work on the bridge and awaits an inspection by the Southampton Town Highway Department and the New York State Department of Transportation for the issuance of a certificate of occupancy.

DAY THREE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-FIVE

The dirigible Akron floats close to the dirigible mast, is secured, and passengers disembark into a small entryway at the top of the Empire State Building and make their way down to the observation deck.

Southampton Town rejects the Sagaponack Bridge. The design of the bridge has been changed, apparently by the railroad, without approvals from the town, to accommodate higher double-decker railroad cars that were not in use when the first bridge was constructed in 1913. The result is a high hump at the center of the bridge, which oncoming traffic approaching in either direction cannot see over. Using the bridge without rectifying this problem is an invitation to head-on auto collisions. The railroad is told to tear down the new bridge and rebuild it as approved.

DAY FOUR HUNDRED

A second attempt at docking the Akron to the mast of the Empire State Building is cancelled because of high winds.

Inconvenienced Sagaponack residents, appearing in Town Hall for a hearing about the bridge, demand that something be done. The Long Island Railroad proposes that the bridge be allowed to stand, but that new higher approaches be built to deal with the sightline problem.

DAY FOUR HUNDRED THIRTY

All interior work for the tenants of the Empire State Building is nearing completion. The building is to be managed by Helmsley Spear, Inc.

Southampton Town Planning Board approves the revisions proposed by the railroad. Wrangling begins over who is to pay for the extra cost of raising the approaches.

DAY FOUR HUNDRED SIXTY

The Empire State Building unofficially opens. Lights go on. The heat and elevators work. Tenants are scurrying about.

Southampton Town Board approves the revisions by the railroad. Wrangling continues about the extra cost.

DAY FOUR HUNDRED NINETY

In Washington, a ceremony takes place at which President Herbert Hoover commemorates the official opening of the Empire State Building by pushing a button and turning on the building's lights.

Railroad and Town come to terms about who should pay for the extra costs of the approaches. Town Highway Department is issued orders to construct the new approaches.

DAY FIVE HUNDRED TWENTY

It is decided that dirigible dockings at the mast of the Empire State Building are not commercially practical because of the occasional high winds.

Southampton Town Highway Department brings in fresh fill and builds steeper approaches to the bridge.

DAY FIVE HUNDRED FIFTY

Southampton Town Highway Department completes its work and, together with the Long Island Railroad, turns the paperwork over to the Town Board for final approvals.

DAY FIVE HUNDRED EIGHTY

Southampton Town, together with Southampton Police, schedule a "soft, quiet" opening of the Sagaponack Bridge for Wednesday, February 12, 2003. Event is postponed due to a brief dusting of snow on that day. Rescheduled for Tuesday, February 18, 2003 at 10 a.m.

At 7 a.m., Tuesday, February 18, 2003, the Blizzard of '03 comes to an end after dumping twenty-five and a half inches of snow on Sagaponack as measured by the official weather station on Lumber Lane in Bridgehampton.

By 10 a.m., a huge mound of snow, twenty-feet high, has been plowed up the southern approach to the Sagaponack Bridge completely blocking all passage to the bridge.

At twenty feet, this mound of snow is among the highest structures in Southampton and equals one-fifteenth the total height of the Empire State Building.

With the community still digging out of what has been the third deepest snowstorm since 1900, the opening of the Sagaponack Bridge is once again cancelled.

Total Time to complete and open the Empire State Building: 490 days.

Total time to complete and open the Sagaponack Bridge: 580 days and counting. •

Eve Ensler's groundbreaking show, The Vagina Monologues, is a series of lyrical vignettes that are often hilarious, sometimes heartbreaking, but always illuminating.

In 1997, Ensler gathered a group of friends and asked them to help her figure out a way to use the show to end violence toward women. "We came up with V-Day: Vagina Day, anti-Violence Day, Victory Day," Ensler says. "We invited all these great women to come, and they agreed. Now it's more than a show, it's a campaign."

North Fork Critics' Choice

North Fork Best Of The Best Winners
A-Appetizers, B-Brunch, E-Dessert, F-Duck Dish, G-Family Restaurant, M-New Chef, ,N-New Restaurant, R-Salad, S-Seafood Restaurant, U-Take-Out, V-Wine List, W-Wraps,

Cooperage Inn. Chefs Liamo and Hegeman carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Freshness of local ingredients evident in every bite, produce comes from neighboring farmstands. Inspired appetizers, topped by pan-seared fresh mozzarella over spinach with artichoke hearts and plum tomatoes. Homemade dressings enliven fresh salads, notably the house salad of greens, fruits, raisins and nuts. Superb steaks and pastas. Rigatoni ala vodka with pancetta, basil and sage, particularly noteworthy. Cornmeal encrusted Atlantic salmon attains a very high level. Excellent values include grilled double pork chops atop wild mushroom herb stuffing. Owner Jonathan Perkins' stylish country restaurant is a North Fork gem. Entrees $14-$30. Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 6/29/01). [B]

Do Little's. Very welcoming and unpretentious. An excellent menu for diners interested in fresh, smartly prepared dishes that are not calorically trumped up. Thai mussels in ginger/lemongrass broth hit the mark. Excellent pasta dishes, headlined by justifiably famous Seafood Pasta in white wine sauce, filled with mussels, clams and shrimp over linguine with fresh tomatoes and spinach. Stuffed ravioli with sun-dried tomatoes and mozzarella is beautifully done. Sensibly priced wine list, with a knowing nod to local vintages. Entrees, $12.95-$19.95. Rt. 25, Mattituck Plaza, Mattituck. 298-4000. (Bradbrook, 7/28/01). [G]

Fauna. A hip and elegant culinary gem. Co-owner and consulting chef Mark Mittelman's menu astutely incorporates Asian influences into superbly conceived New American dishes. Tuna sashimi shines as an appetizer, as does duck confit atop sautéed spinach with walnuts and dried cranberries. Try and find room for the butternut squash pot stickers. The all-star cast of entrees includes Southeast Asian steak salad, pan-roasted bourbon chicken and a Napoleon of roasted vegetables. Desserts rotate daily. Extensive wine list with sixteen local vineyards. Entrees $20-$26. Route 25, Aquebogue. 722-5813. (Trueman-Honey, 6/7/02). [A,F]

La Plage. Obscure geography, sensational cuisine. This sums up owner/chef Wayne Wadington's destination restaurant on Long Island Sound, north of the tiny village of Wading River. No expense spared in the acquisition of top ingredients. Complex recipes spell highly creative fusion cuisine: New American in heart, French in spirit. Many highlights include: Chilled lobster soup garnished with roe; salad of tart apples with bleu cheese, walnuts and mache; rare yellowfin tuna with homemade potato chips; caramelized jumbo sea scallops with snow crab fritter. Desserts are imaginative and exceptionally well executed. Entrees $17-$28. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 8/4/00). [R,V]

Red Door. Red Alert! Stephan Mazzella, formerly of Lespinasse, has opened a fine new restaurant in Mattituck. His menu is quite versatile and his consistently tasty dishes excite the palate. Typically adventurous and successful is the pan-seared monkfish with a yellow tomato sauce and black olive purée topped by crispy fried leeks. Mazzella's treatment of fish epitomizes Greek and Italian-style preparation at its best. The appetizer of heirloom tomatoes with boccocini mozzarella and fresh basil and balsamic vinegar is a tomato dish for the ages. Innovative desserts, too. Entrees – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Bradbrook, 6/14/02). [E,N]

Ross' Rotisserie and Smokehouse. A casual, homey eat-in or take-out spot opened by John Ross, former chef/owner of Ross' North Fork Restaurant. Great rotisserie and crispy fried chicken; marinated, honey-glazed duck legs; hickory-smoked spareribs; homemade soups and chowders; many cooked-from-scratch side dishes. Every Friday fish fry is an excellent value. A special 6-pound LI duck, cooked crisp, boned and quartered, accompanied by duck sauce and a garnish of apricots and cranberries ($19.99) is available by reservation the day before. Open 7 days 12-8. Route 48, Southold, 765-9655. (Simm, 10/5/01). [U]

The Seafood Barge. The North Fork restaurant for fish lovers. Owner/manager team of Dick Ehrlich and Betsey Flinn are as fanatical about results as Steinbrenner/Torre. Newly imported executive chef Michael Meehan updates the menu's standards and introduces several of his own specialties. Vichyssoise spiked with crab meat and basil oil was a rousing success. Marinated baby octopus with baby spinach was succulent and tender. As for the fish, the sushi appetizer continues to be stellar. The pan-seared striped bass with a red pepper broth is a revelation. Desserts are sensational. Excellent wine list, particularly local vintages. Entrees $24-$32. Port of Egypt Marina, Rt. 25, Southold. 765-3010. (Bradbrook, 7/26/02). [M,S]

Sultan's Kitchen. At last, a good, authentic Eastern Mediterranean for the region. The emphasis is on Turkish cooking, one of the world's healthiest cuisines. The spacious dining room is non-descript, as this is a former pancake emporium; the subtleties are all in the flavoring of the food. Soups such as red lentil and tripe are spiced just right. The varied appetizers favor vegetarians while the main courses concentrate on lamb and chicken, often with delectable results. Turkish baklava and kadayif are exceptional finishing touches. Entrees $6.50-$15.95. 1077 Old Country Road, Riverhead. 369-9766. (Bradbrook, 8/9/02.)

"Reality" Check: Romance And Cheap Thrills

Even if you're not a nose-to-the-tube prime time TV addict, unless you've spent the winter in some obscure tropical locale blissfully unaware of unfolding world dramas (Saddam who?), it's virtually impossible not to have heard of the new "reality" shows.

Trista and Ryan

First, there's Joe Millionaire, a.k.a. Evan Marriott, who's actually NOT a millionaire (at least until the end of the series), but pretends he is to get the girl who in turn, of course, loves him for "richer or," in this case, "poorer." Well, Joe may have been poor before the show, but it's a good bet that future endorsements will mean that he never need return to his $19,000 a year construction job again.

Then there's The Bachelorette, which features a cute, athletic blond, Trista Rehn, who gets to pick a husband from a group of twenty-five eligible guys. All of the men with the exception of two – who eliminated themselves early on – were lining up, willing, ready and able to become "the one." This is reality? On which planet?

Truth is, these "reality" shows are not about "reality" at all. They are about fantasy, and that is precisely what we need during these dark days of terrorist threats, economic turmoil, and looming war. At first, the shows struck me as strange antidotes to these troubled times. But after watching the finale of The Bachelorette, where Trista surprises the world by choosing poetic, "dark horse" Ryan over confidant, shoe-in to win Charlie, even the most jaded viewers out there must have caved a little when Trista delivered the good news to a hopeful Ryan who immediately dropped to one knee and proposed. Will it last? Who knows. But we find ourselves hoping.

The moral of the stories? Even if it does pay for that Harry Winston rock, money does not buy you love. And with the green stuff in short supply these days – just read the unemployment statistics – that's a GOOD thing.

Thriftiness is, let's face it, much less fun than unlimited budgets. But it does create a more discerning buyer, and that can make finding real buys an exciting challenge.

For some time now, Long Island vineyard owners have been criticized for pricing their wines too high. And in response to that criticism, more and more wineries are making "second label" wines that are priced right and taste great. Peconic Bay Winery's Local Flavor Merlot retails for $10.99 at the winery and it is an excellent value. While it lacks some of the complexity of the vintage version, it has soft tannins and is surprisingly full bodied for its price. Aged in French oak for fourteen months, the wine is full of fruit.

Another winner is Lieb Cellars' second label Chardonnay, Bridge Lane. With a stylish round label and a $10 price tag, this 100 percent stainless steel fermented Chard (with a hint of Pinot Blanc added for complexity) is outstanding. The wine, a lovely golden color, is redolent of tart apples with a hint of ripe pear. It is also being offered at a special case price of $96 (that's $8 a bottle!) at the winery in Mattituck. If there's a finer Long Island wine available for $8, I haven't tasted it. Highly recommended.

So while a trip to Harry's or a Nike commercial may not be in your immediate future, there's always that thing called hope. After all, in terms of Long Island wines, $10 doesn't buy what it used to. And that IS good news. Cheers.

Shop 'Til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

Finally, I'm out of the woods so to speak. My driveway is a complete mess, my legs are killing me, and I need a new car. Little problems, little problems. Let's do some serious shopping, that cures all.

Starting out in Westhampton Beach, I stopped in at Pine Cone to check out their winter sale there through the month of March. This best kept secret shop is located on Glovers Lane and has been there for thirteen-years and if you love eclectic, you will love Pine Cone! There are price ranges for every pocket book, from ridiculous to the sublime. The store features such lines as Maitland Smith, Limoges, Haleyon Days Enamels, Provence, Costa Boda and much more. All items are on sale for up to 50% off. It's a fun shopping experience, don't miss out on this one!

On North Sea Road in the Village of Southampton at English Country Home, which is the outlet store for English Country Antiques there is so much to choose from in home furnishings and accessories. Look for their February sale deals on couches, lamps, tables, dining sets and so much more. Say hi to Nancy the store manager; she will be happy to assist you.

On Main Street in Southampton at Gallery Eclectic you can still get that perfect gift for that special someone in your life. Catherine Agiel is still offering her timeles pieces that are made from briolette and rose cut diamonds that are set in gold or platinum. "Romance" matching earrings and necklace are also available at Gallery Eclectic.

Heading east, I stopped in an Antique and Home Furnishings store that I spotted from Montauk Highway in Watermill. Barn arage is set back off the highway and I couldn't help but notice the beautiful iron outdoor dining set in of all colors, purple. This store is the cat's meow! I ran into my friend Blaise and we toured the shop together. He was thrilled with a great vintage vest that was on sale for only $25. There are one-of-a-kind and decorative home furnishings at real deal prices and every week Stan (the owner) gets in new additions for the home and office and will also buy your items or complete home contents. Open every day from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., stop in or give a call at 631-834-6897.

Also on Montauk Highway in Watermill you will really get some great buys on pianos with the piano clearance sale at the Piano Barn. Everyone loves a piano. Give a call at 631-726-4640 for an appointment or stop in on Saturdays 11-4.

In Montauk, At Home En Provence located on Tuthill Road, is filled to the rafters with brand new furniture, dinnerware, table linens, imported bedding Biot glassware, and gifts for the fashionable, the slective and the young at heart. Call 631-668-4808 for information.

Until next week. Ciao and happy winter shopping!

If you know of any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops or sales, please email me at shoptil@danspapers.com / fax: 631-537-3330.

Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

A draft?

It was a pretty rough morning last Wednesday. I had two morning lectures, one at eight o'clock and one at ten fifteen. The hard one to get to is the eight o'clock, of course. I never look forward to going to that one.

For some reason, when you are in college, going to an early class is a big deal. It is kind of funny because I can remember being in grade school and getting up every day at six o'clock, studying like crazy as the terrifying eye of Sister Angela gazed over me at St. Andrews (now called Stella Maris) Catholic School in Sag Harbor.

I can also remember being at East Hampton High School and doing the same thing, but also going to sports practices afterwards, then after that going to play rehearsal. I would not get home until eleven at night. This would give me an hour to watch back to back Seinfeld episodes. The next morning I would do it all over again.

Even the summers during ninth grade were tough. I was working at Main Beach as a beach boy. The job required five days a week of sweeping and taking the garbage. I was up at five a.m. every day for football practice, and then my mom would pick me up and take me to the beach for work at eight.

Now, however, things are a little different. I take naps in the middle of the day. I get angry when I have to wake up before ten. Yes, I do have a lot of reading and studying, but it is not so much that I have to study from five in the morning until midnight.

Anyway, let me get back to telling you about the morning. I was on my way to my eight o'clock lecture and completely unhappy. I was early, however, and planned on stopping at a stand that is adjacent to the lecture hall where they sell breakfast burritos for three dollars. It was around seven thirty and there was a small line.

I got the burrito and sat down on the steps in front of the hall where a small crowd of people out in front of the lecture hall were drinking coffee and eating breakfast burritos. Everyone was waiting for eight to come around so that they could get to the lecture and get it over with. This is the norm at Northeastern University.

While sitting down on the steps and eating, I found myself positioned in between a group of four alpha males at Northeastern. They were your typical business students. They all had nice dress shirts and khaki pants along with pea coats and clean haircuts. One of them lit up a cigarette while the other one started talking about going to war. He looked over at the group and asked, "Any of you guys worried about a draft?"

The guy with the cigarette replied after taking a drag, "I've thought about this actually. It is definitely possible. They did it in Vietnam, what's to stop them from doing it now? I can tell you one thing, if there was a draft you would be seeing me heading for Canada like it was nobody's business."

All of them started laughing at this and they explained to each other how they would avoid a draft should all hell break loose. One said he would tell the army that he wet the bed. Another said that he would take a boat to the Caribbean. Another said that he didn't think that he would do anything. He kind of liked the idea of being a soldier and running around killing people.

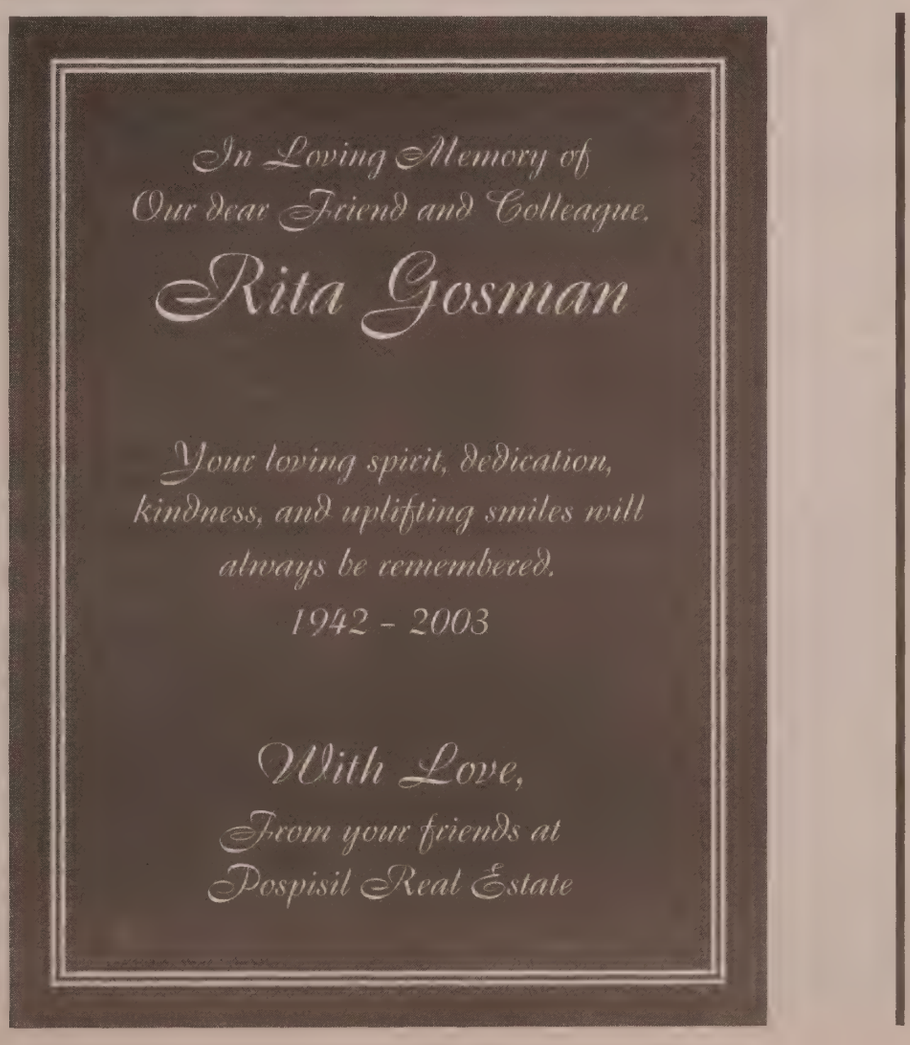
I have thought a lot about this as well. As I sat there eating my burrito and listening to this conversation I found myself thinking about the things that could happen if there was a draft.

In my opinion, one of two things would happen. Everyone would sign up happily because they are bored of studying all day and want to run around playing war games at boot camp like they do in the commercials. They would sign up, play games, some would die, and others would live. Everyone would agree that that is just the way it goes. Or, the opposite of this would happen. Everyone would run for Canada and hide. They would protest. Police would shoot tear gas and in the end young kids would die. I don't like either of these outcomes.

I really wish there was not an innate desire inside us to fight one another. I wish that we could be happy that one lives one way while the other lives the other way. One happily worships God one way and the other gladly worships God another way and that is all fine and we could all go out and have a picnic or something. I just don't get why people need to fight one another.

Sometimes I like the idea of being a soldier as well. I admit it. There is something in every male youth that attracts them to war and fighting. It seems primitive in some way. The Army commercials get me excited. My whole life I have watched James Bond and war movies. These commercials make you think that you will do things like that. However, I am not a primitive person and I know that if you look at the whole picture, you are being trained to kill people you do not know. People who may have families, who have warm hearts, who care about their lives.

We can do so many other wonderful things. We can make music, we can play soccer, we can go dancing. What does fighting get us? It does not seem to get us much except a bunch of dead bodies. The bottom line is that when you take a step back from it, that is what you get, a bunch of dead bodies lying around with bullets that were manufactured at the behest of the government inside of them. I hate this whole damn situation and the fact that we are living in a time where my classmates and friends are worrying about a draft or an anthrax attack. I know people that are transferring just to get out of the city of Boston. We've got spies and planes and bombs and fear. What happened to love and peace and life and trust? Whatever happened to the idea that most people are good? What has our history taught us?



Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Daredevil

The skaty-eighth comic book hero to be redrawn onto the big screen is DareDevil. This one is swishily swashed and unbuckled by Ben Affleck, as an ineffectual lawyer by day and a one-man vigilante team by night to seek justice for his wronged clients. It doesn't pay much, but gee, it's better than sitting home alone at night and sulking. You see, I'm sure you do, but he doesn't... he's as blind as a bat (apologies to Bat Man). And is his face red! You bet, as is the rest of his skin-tight getup, a scarlet leather body suit that is outfitted with six-pack abs. Val Kilmer's Bat Man suit was replete with nipples. "Holy Cow, Bat Man!" Robin was heard to exclaim. Like Super and Spider you-know-whats, Daredevil works alone, armed only with his unsighted person's walking stick. Yes, he is totally blind. He lost his sight when a youth. He was doused with biochemical waste, fortunately, from the waist up so, manly-wise he's in fairly good form, that is for a guy in red tights with no super human powers. You see (sorry about that) his sightlessness has sharpened his other senses to the Nth degree and beyond... to Z! This, combined with dancing lessons from a talented ninja, has made him agile but fragile in most other areas. In an effort to suckle at the cash-cow of comic book franchises, the movie makers have sucked out what they could of the more well-known comic punishers of evil doers like Spider Man, Superman, Bat Man and, Bush Man. Their crème-de-la-crème power, though curdled by now, is watered down to thinner than Lite by contrived differences and that l'il devil Ben's cookie-eatin', grinnin', angelic yuppie face and demeanor that belie the horns on his helmet mask and the stunts obviously done by special effects.

The over-milked story line thickens with the appearance of Jennifer Garner as Elektra. Don't ask why or how, she just is... a martial arts whiz and she manages to get Benny sexy! (Apologies to the other Jennifer, his girlfriend.) Ms. Garner and Mr. Affleck do battle mano-a-mano, cheek-to-jowl, buttock-to-buttock, with kick-butt sensuality. It's kind of acrobatic foreplay. The most enjoyment is provided by Colin Farrell (The Recruit). As Bullseye, an Irish assassin, he's gleefully as mad as a dog given a rubber bone. No one threw a bone to Michael Clarke Duncan. His huge size and talent is lost behind a cigar as Kingpin, the villain boss of Hell's Kitchen (get it?). A note to consider about an African-American as a bad guy... OK, but Cuba Gooding, Jr. wanted the Daredevil role. I guess he didn't look good in red dominatrix leather. Anyway, the masked crusader thing has been whipped to a fair-thee-well. No matter, they keep coming back. Another X-Men is on the way, as is green-with-mould, The Hulk. Obviously, the "Man Without Fear," who alone takes it upon himself to avenge righteousness, will keep coming back as long as people accept WHAM! POW! BLAM! entertainment and solutions.

ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Open Hearts (+)

A parched-earth condition has occupied the movie screens for the last few weeks. Last weekend, with slim pickings available, I decided to see the Danish movie Open Hearts. A New York Times reviewer stated that he liked the opening of the film but thought it turned into a soap opera, and my movie companion found it unbelievable and boring. I enjoyed the film and disagreed with their reviews.

Joachim (Nikolaj Lie Kaas) leaves the car of his fiancée, Cecile (Sonja Richter), and is hit by a car driven by Marie (Paprika Steen). His spine is crushed and he is a quadriplegic reminiscent of Christopher Reeves. When he learns that his condition is irreversible, he understandably becomes bitter, especially toward Cecile. For the moment, she remains in love with him and she too is bitter toward the world.

At the hospital, Cecile meets a physician, Niels (Mads Mikkelson), who is the husband of Marie who disabled Joachim. Niels falls in love with Cecile and thus begins the breakup of his family consisting of two young sons and a juvenile daughter.

The film is part of the Dogma 95 series which does not use in filming artificial lighting or some other modern equipment and sometimes ends up with scenes far too dark and out of focus. That aspect did not interfere with my enjoyment of this film as sometimes happens in Dogma 95 productions.

The lovers are prisoners of their emotions. The doctor suffers enormous psychological pain as he betrays his wife. Cecile who deeply loved her now totally disabled fiancée knows she cannot live alone and wants a relationship. Marie, who was very angry and wanted to hurt her husband, knows that she ultimately wants him back regardless the emotional cost.

Open Hearts is not a top-notch film, but it is certainly acceptable. The Scandinavian actors are stunning in appearance, and the acting of the three principals is superb. The script is exceedingly poignant and, at least for me, never became a soap opera.

Before Ed Koch was a film critic for Dan's Papers he was the Mayor of New York.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

ART-IN-EDUCATION: MEDIA STUDIES AT THE ROSS SCHOOL

Collaborative endeavors in the arts (the subject of last week's "Commentary") are especially relevant when we consider an independent educational institution like East Hampton's Ross School. Sharing materials, resources and ideas among the various academic disciplines is not only often convenient but also a philosophical imperative.

Even so, "sharing" seems a tepid description to characterize the Ross School's approach. In a nutshell, the word suggests an integrated curriculum where individual courses cover varied subject matter. Unusual as this may sound, the concept isn't new considering the Postmodern way of looking at both life and art, generally. Thus, we have the idea of hybrid forms: in film (The Blair Witch Project's combination of documentary and fictional techniques); in art (Eric Fischl's coexistence of classical and contemporary themes).

Such hybridization is not often associated with an academic curriculum, however, but it's particularly viable, for example, in a math class at the Ross School where students learn through music. Multimedia is combined with the Humanities in an eleventh grade examination of Civil War photography.

Media Studies is another pursuit that derives from diverse sources according to the program's dean, Reggie Woolery. One such endeavor featured a situation comedy created by the students in the school's TV studio. "After all, we are all storytellers, and we deal with storytelling in many grades," Mr. Woolery explains with enthusiasm.

Mr. Woolery also talks with equal energy about a senior project where students produced documentaries featuring well-known people, combining media, history, and research. "We stress being both a generalist and a specialist here. We want to make connections at a high level, levels which are creative and challenging."

When asked about the role that technology plays in this "high level," Mr. Woolery recognizes that "We are interested in a hands-on approach, where pupils will understand the origins of technology, even if we have to go back to the wheel. However, I find that the students already possess the skills needed; we help with the concepts."

Mr. Woolery himself seems to manifest many of the ideas he supports. He is both a generalist and a specialist, combining communication technology, research and visual arts: he has a degree in art from Parsons, possesses training in documentary/independent filmmaking (with the Third World Newreel project) and attended New York University's Interactive Program. As an educator, Mr. Woolery has taught Afro-American cinema at the New School.

In a nutshell, Mr. Woolery straddles a lot of disciplines and concerns, or as his colleague Geoffrey Gordon aptly puts it, "Reggie is an academic, an artist and a technician."

We would be remiss not to notice that such "straddling," and for that matter, sharing, pervades space at the Ross School as well. The music students are practicing a composition in the TV studio, pottery is very much at home in a room filled with strange-looking media equipment.

It's just an average day at the Ross School where art knows no bounds.

Honoring the Artist: Daniel Polera

Unlike the rest of us suffering from the recent snowstorm, artist Daniel Polera was happily having fun with his family at Florida's Driftwood Resort, warm in a cozy condo while we East Enders were freezing as we busily shoveled our way to main roads.

Mr. Polera was a bit apologetic when he explained that it's not unusual for him to enjoy a Florida respite; he had no idea, in fact, that he'd be escaping a bad storm this particular year. That he likes it in Florida is apparent as he says with enthusiasm, "It seems like home here; it feels snug and secure." Yet asked if he would like to retire to Florida someday or even have a studio there, Mr. Polera answers with equal enthusiasm, "There's no place I'd rather be than on Long Island."

Mr. Polera's paintings, which are often turned into posters, are also concerned with coziness and security. They feature beach scenes where the ambience evokes comfort and familiarity: a safe place. Part of Mr. Polera's appeal might, therefore, derive from the unsafe and threatening conditions present in today's world.

This week's cover depicts a man walking his dog on the beach; it seems especially appropriate, reminding us of more pleasant times. We can't help but wonder if Mr. Polera actually witnessed this scene or is it part of his collection of images which he stores in his head?

"I experienced a vision of this scene," Mr. Polera explains. "I probably have seen it before, and it left an impression. The image has to be something that I have a strong feeling for, an emotion that's warm or melancholy. Sometimes, however, I have an inspiration first, and then I go off and try and to find that specific setting."

Whatever method Mr. Polera uses, however, he usually ends up altering the reality that he finds. Once he captures the setting's mood, he figures out the composition. "For example, I may add a rocking chair to a porch," Mr. Polera notes. "I sketch the chair on tracing paper and move it around on the porch. The eye and the brain will tell you where it belongs. I call that place the 'sweet spot.'"

A composition by Mr. Polera recently attracted the attention of HarperCollins Publishing, who asked him to create a cover for their best-selling author, Jacqueline Mitchard (The Deep End of the Ocean). " I repainted a piece for the cover, replacing a hammock with a wedding bouquet and two flutes of champagne," Mr. Polera says. " I felt so commited to the author who worked really hard on the book. I wanted to give it my all."

We have a feeling Mr. Polera can say that about all his work.

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

Mr. Polera's work can be seen at New York's Decor Expo on Feb. 28 and March 1 (at the Javitt's Center).

theatre reviews: the last sunday in june & sleeping with straight men

Homophobia seems to be alive and well, as evidenced by the recent opening off-Broadway of two gay-themed plays, which make this point most clear. Jonathan Tolins, author of Twilight of the Gods, has given us The Last Sunday in June, a look into the lives of a group of men celebrating the annual Gay Pride March. Sleeping With Straight Men by Ronnie Larsen chronicles the life of a gay man, who is killed after he reveals a secret crush for an apparent straight man on national television.

Mr. Tolins is a talented writer, who has a fine ear for witty dialogue and amusing antidotes. His story set in Michael and Tom's Christopher Street apartment, as directed by Trip Cullman, portrays the men as sniveling, self absorbed narcissists. Their friends, who drop in to visit as the two men prepare for a move to the suburbs, are not far removed form the self loathing characters of Mart Crowley's The Boys in the Band. It is difficult to care about this bunch of spoiled brats, and it is most disappointing because I feel these guys could have come off much better. What we get instead is the least common denominator played for the obvious. When these guys cried I felt nothing. There is little substance to the characters, and although Mr. Cullman's direction keeps the action moving at a crisp pace, he ultimately lets down not only the playwright, but the actors. The characters have no courage and are unable to commit to anything, but a flight into their own fantasy and denial. It ultimately becomes a sad comment on gay culture, which may or may not be true. Even if it is an accurate picture, there are exceptions, and it is the exceptions and how they rise above the mire that is interesting. These guys are just wallowing in it. Tom's ex even decides to reject the life and marry a woman, who he admits he may never have sex with. This is not exactly life affirming stuff.

The set by Takeshi Kata is nicely realistic and serves the play well. The energetic actors are all talented. I just wish they had been allowed to do more. I'm sure they would have delivered some surprises instead of just another gay play. Has the gay consciousness really evolved so little in almost four decades? Are we all so totally self absorbed in the hot pursuit of the next meaningless sexual encounter? Granted much of the blame must be put on the play itself, but in another director's hands, it could have been more absorbing theatre. Michael and Tom could have emerged as hopeful role models.

Mr. Larson's new play (also directed by him) is based on a notorious true story and is intended as a critique of tabloid culture and homophobia. To that end he is somewhat successful, but as entertaining though provoking theater the evening is also a disappointment. I have always felt that it is most difficult, if not impossible, for an author to direct his own work. The director's purpose is to bring another level another perspective to the author's words, and this is precisely what is missing from the evening. To his credit Mr. Larson has made inventive use of the unique space, having the action move all around the tiny theater on and off the stage and even placing some of the actor's in the audience. This is very clever and keeps the action moving at a swift pace.

The acting, however, is not very good. To their credit the actors are natural and sincere in their attempts, but it is all one dimensional lacking in real emotional depth. This is a problem with the direction where the focus is on the words and as a result the truths in the moments are sacrificed. Jared Scott as Stanley comes off best, but his sex scene with Aaron Wimmer as Lee is played for the obvious and lacking in titillation. The scene itself doesn't make any sense. One is left wondering why Lee goes all the way with Stanley. Stanley does little to actually seduce him, and Lee shows no repressed conflict or even a momentary lustful desire. Unfortunately, just like the evening things don't add up. – Gordin & Christiano

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Have you used your Cuisinart lately?

In 1973 I read an article in the New York Times written by the late James Beard, one of Americas great authorities on food. He wrote about a machine called Cuisinart and that it was like having an extra pair of hands in the kitchen. This was music to my ears as I was just beginning to venture into the fascinating world of food. I didn't walk I ran to purchase my first Cuisinart.

The machine, discovered by a gentleman named Carl Sontheimer, at a housewares show in Paris, France, as the original Robot Coupe. Mr. Sontheimer, an electrical engineer brought the machine to the United States and the rest, as they say, is history. Carl Sontheimer was also a man who loved good food and at the time was at the cutting edge of the food revolution. It would take at least three more years for the machine to truly catch on and when it did cooking classes devoted to the sole use of the machine were being offered at cooking schools across the country. I was part of that history having opened my own school in Tenafly, New Jersey in 1976.

A workbowl and cover constructed to activate the machine comes with several blades that can chop, shred, slice and even knead. Although millions have been sold in the last thirty years there are still people out there who, believe it or, do not own one. Here are some of the recipes that I taught in Cuisinart cooking classes more than twenty years ago.

CARROT, ZUCCHINI AND RADISH SALAD WITH PARSLEY VINAIGRETTE

The components are served side by side for an attractive presentation.

Serves 6-8

1 pound carrots, trimmed and peeled
2 firm narrow zucchini, scrubbed and ends trimmed
1 bunch radishes, scrubbed and ends trimmed

For the vinaigrette

2-3 shallots
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
2 tablespoons white wine or tarragon vinegar
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1/3 cup parsley leaves
1 teaspoon fresh thyme leaves
4-6 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

1. Place shredding blade in workbowl of food processor. Cut carrots and zucchini in lengths to fit the feed tube horizontally. Working with one vegetable at a time, insert pieces sideways in feed tube. With machine running plunge firmly on the vegetable with the pusher to shred. Transfer to individual mixing bowls and set aside. Wipe workbowl clean with paper towels.

2. Replace shredding blade with slicing blade. Stack radishes in feed tube and slice thin with light pressure. Transfer to a small bowl. Wipe workbowl clean with paper towel.

3. Replace slicing blade with the knife blade. Finely chop shallots while pulsing the machine on and off several times, scraping down sides with a rubber spatula. Add the mustard, vinegar, herbs and season with salt and pepper. Process to mix with the shallots. With machine running add oil in a slow steady stream through the feed tube until mixture is homogenous. Taste for salt and pepper.

4. Add enough dressing to coat each vegetable separately and toss to incorporate. Arrange a mound of carrots and zucchini opposite each other. Garnish with radishes between the two vegetables. Serve at room temperature.

GODIVEAU AUX TOMATE

I was delighted to remember these poached oval-shaped veal quenelles in tomato sauce.

Serves 6

2 large shallots, peeled
1 pound boneless veal cut into 1-inch pieces
1/2 cup heavy cream or broth
1 egg
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1 tablespoon olive oil

For the tomato sauce

1 can (1 lb. 12 oz.) plum tomatoes
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
3-4 tablespoons fresh basil leaves
3 tablespoons unsalted butter, thinly sliced

1. With knife blade in place and machine running drop shallots through feed tube and finely chop, scraping down sides as necessary. Remove cover and put veal directly in the bowl in an even layer. Cover and process for 7 seconds. Be careful not to overprocess the meat or it will be mushy. Add cream, egg and seasoning and process quickly just to mix. Transfer to a mixing bowl.

2. Prepare quenelles (oval shapes) by dipping two oval spoons into hot water then filling one spoon with the chopped mixture to turn out an oval shape with the other spoon. Arrange quenelles in a lightly oiled Dutch saute or large skillet with a cover.

3. With knife blade in place put tomatoes, salt, pepper and basil leaves in workbowl and process until mixture is pureed. With rubber spatula scrape the mixture directly over the Quenelles. Place butter over the sauce here and there. Can be prepared ahead to this point.

4. When ready to serve, bring ingredients in the pan to the edge of a boil. Adjust heat to a simmer and poach the quenelles for 16-18 minutes. With slotted spoon transfer quenelles to a warm serving platter. Reduce sauce over high heat for a few minutes to thicken slightly. Pour over veal and serve immediately.

QUICK AND EASY ROLLS IN THE FOOD PROCESSOR

It is important to note that each procedure is processed in seconds.

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 1/2 tablespoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 package active dry yeast
2 tablespoons unsalted butter
1/2 cup milk
1/4 cup water

1. Place knife blade in workbowl of processor and put in the flour, sugar, salt and yeast. Process about 5 seconds. Add butter and process 15 seconds longer.

2. Warm milk and water in a saucepan to 115 degrees or lukewarm. Be sure the milk is not hot. With machine running slowly pour liquid through the feed tube until a ball of dough forms on the blades. Allow dough to spin on the blade for 50 seconds.

3. Transfer dough to a lightly greased bowl, cover and place in a warm water bath for 45 minutes until doubled in size. Turn dough onto a lightly floured board and roll out to a 9 x 12-inch rectangle. Cut into 12 equal strips about 1-inch wide and wind around to form a coil. Place on a lightly greased baking sheet about 2-inches apart as they are formed. Cover and let rise about 30 minutes.

4. Bake the rolls in a 425 degree preheated oven for 12 -14 minutes or until golden brown. Transfer to a rack to cool and enjoy while fresh.

Dining In The Hamptons

Side Dish
By Aji Jones

If you haven't already heard there is a big change going on at Phao in Sag Harbor. It looks as though the posh Thai restaurant has closed its doors for good to make way for a new seafood restaurant and retail fish market. Owner Jeff Resnick will partner with attorney Edward Burke Jr. on the venture. Phao will move its most popular dishes across the street to Sen, also owned by Resnick. The grand opening of the New England-style chowder house, which will take over spaces formerly occupied by Phao and the frame shop next door, is scheduled for April. Reportedly the new restaurant will be called Jeff and Eddie's Seafood, however we hear that the name may be changed to the hipper Big Fish.

Besides great brick oven pizza and Italian specialties, Rubi Red has live music in the lounge on weekends. Also, you can check out happy hour every day from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. and tarot card readings on Wednesdays.

Nick & Toni's has a great new winter dinner series called "Making a Difference." It'll begin on Friday, March 7 with "The Winter Foods of Long Island." The evening starts with wine and hors d'oeuvres followed by a five-course meal prepared by Executive Chef Joseph Realmuto and Chef de Cuisine Seth Caswell. A Long Island wine will be served with each course. The cost for the evening will be $125, plus tax and gratuity, per person. A percentage (20%) of each meal will be donated to Quail Hill Community Farm and East Hampton Town Baymen Association. Call for reservations at (631) 324-3550. The next dinner will be on March 28th.

Irishman Frank Coe, chef at Wild Goose in Cutchogue will be at The James Beard House on St. Patrick's Day. Chef Coe will be preparing traditional Irish cuisine especially for the holiday. No menu available yet, but tickets will be on sale in the near future so watch this space for more info or call 212-675-4984.

Congratulations to Todd Jacobs chef at Tierra Mar. Todd is presently honeymooning with his new wife Jen and their baby boy Zane in Hawaii. Fans of this popular Westhampton restaurant shouldn't worry however, Todd will be back soon to prepare more of his delicious cuisine.

Don't forget about the upcoming East End Food & Wine Awards. This new annual event will be held on April 6 at Tierra Mar and will honor food and wine professionals of the East End. Tickets are going fast so get on the phone to reserve a seat (725-3899). Also if you are a chef or restaurant owner in this area feel free to call and get info on how you and your establishment can be considered for an award.

The 1770 House was the site for a festive send off for two East End food industry stalwarts. The guests of honor were Julie Berger, a waitress at the ever swank and celeb-ulous Nick & Toni's and her partner in crime and travels Jim Leahy, the owner of hamptonstation.com and a bartender there. Both have worked extensively in the trade serving up delectable delights from Della Femina and Rowdy Hall to name just a few. On hand to bid them a fond farewell were Bonnie Munshin, Kirsten La Bue, Seth Caswell, Vinnie Wolfe and Elizabeth Jett. While we will miss them dearly, we wish them every happiness and success as they head westward to California to start a new and snow-less life.

The dish hears that Billy Joel was spotted at Della Femina in East Hampton on Valentine's Day accompanied by a black haired beauty. What were they eating? Well they only had dessert accompanied by a bottle of expensive Italian red wine. However, they returned on Saturday to enjoy a full meal. Billy ate the beet salad and sea bass while his dinner guest dined on the pork chop. Once again they split a bottle of red wine. Likewise Eric Ripert, chef of Le Bernadin stopped in for a Saturday night meal with his wife.

Dining In The Hamptons

75 Main

75 Main Street, Southampton
631-283-7575

Last Saturday evening, a few out of town girlfriends and I had the pleasure of attending 75 Main's food and wine tasting event, "A Sensation Celebration." And what a fitting title this is because as we discovered, all of our senses were stimulated and titillated at this great party.

Executive Chef Steven Biscari-Amaral successfully coordinated a very exciting and eclectic seven-course meal paired with five distinctly diverse California wines. His ability to plan such an extensive and daring menu comes from many years of cooking experience while traveling around the world. He received an Associate of Science from Johnson and Wales and then it was off to France, Italy, Germany, Israel, Hawaii, Florida and NYC. He is the recipient of numerous culinary awards including first place winner at the Hawaii Seafood Challenge, bronze medal winner at the Fort Lauderdale Culinary Arts Salon and nominated "Chef of the Year"(Pacific NW) by the James Beard Foundation in NYC.

Steven's television credits include the Discovery Channel's, Great Chefs series featuring chefs from Hawaii, where he claims he gained most of his cooking influence, and CNN's Hawaii Cooks with Roy Yamaguchi." Steven's cooking has also been featured in Bon Appetite and Food and Wine magazines. And he is an accomplished artist and ice sculptor. 75 Main boasts several of Steven's paintings throughout the restaurant, but enough about the chef, let me get back to the party.

We began with the Rabbit Ridge '99 Sauvignon Blanc from Healdsburg, California, which was light, but slightly oakey with a fruity after-taste and paired well with oriental vegetables wrapped in rice paper with peanuts and mint leaves. Then it was on to the Estancia '00 Chardonnay which is an excellent wine by itself, but to our delight was served with the sesame-crusted, crab-filled salmon in an avocado puree, any sushi lover would appreciate. Then our nostrils were awakened by the aroma of the tender and juicy Korean barbecued venison with spicy cabbage slaw accompanied by a glass of Villa Mt. Eden '00 Pinot Noir from St. Helena, California – a daring, but interesting combination. Our next wine was a Sterling '00 Cabernet Sauvignon which we were informed had the slightest hint of black cherry and was a perfect choice to go with the lamb couscous with dried fruit and almonds. I was slightly disappointed at the small amounts of lamb in this dish, only because lamb is one of my favorite meats. For our intermezzo and palate cleanser, we were served a warm ginger, honey and lemon infusion, and a flavorful oriental tea. And then the main course arrived: the succulent and not at all gamey Long Island duck cooked with black currants and port wine and paired with a Ravenswood '99 Zinfindel from Mendocino, California probably my favorite wine of the evening because it didn't overpower the duck but complimented it perfectly.

Dessert was served with piping hot coffee and consisted of a huge banana-pecan wonton topped with a scoop of the most heavenly cinnamon-maple ice cream. I would probably have preferred the wonton right out of the oven; but then again "some like it hot!"

As an observer and active participant, I would think that a successful wine tasting event would not only be evaluated on the chef's ability to pair the right foods with the wine, but the timing balanced with the choice of music is extremely imperative. And this is where 75 Main really excels. The sophisticated and sexy vocals of Laura Mann and friends serenades you live as you indulge in your tasting. Her sultry alto voice and phenomenal choice of songs turned this wine tasting event into a fabulous evening. She sang a jazzy version of "Rockin' Robin," a superb rendition of "Rolling Down the River" and even added a unique twist to "Happy Birthday."

It is obvious that chef, Steven Biscari-Amaral and the entire staff of 75 Main are well experienced. The restaurant continues to host these wine tasting events every other Saturday during the winter months for the very reasonable price of $45. So why wait until the Summer to start partying, Bring all your friends down to Southampton and allow your taste buds to go exploring, and then afterwards dance it off to a live DJ. I know I'll be back soon! Call for reservations. –Denise Bornschein

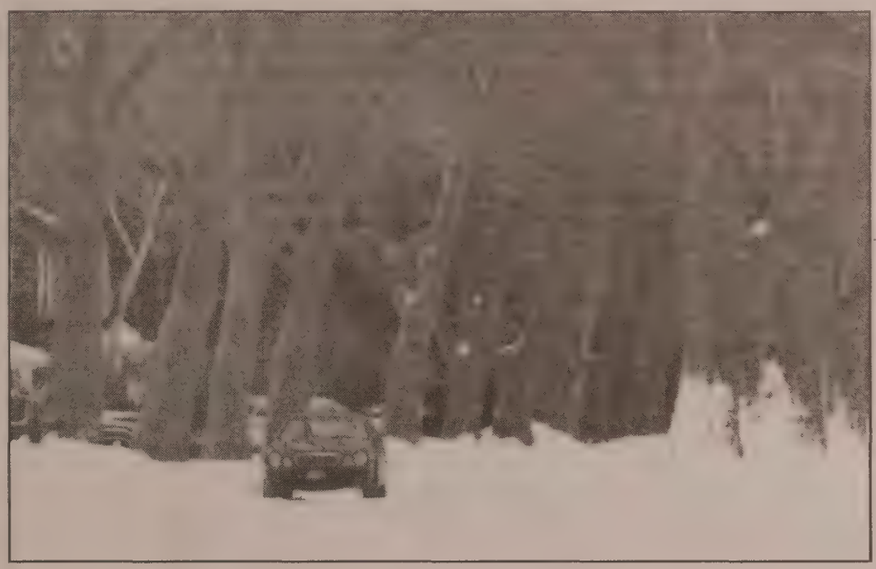
Take An Umbrella, It's Raining (Or, Slippery Driving)

There is a school of journalism that Dan has instructed those writing for the back of this newspaper to avoid at all costs. He has dubbed it the "Take an Umbrella, It's Raining"-style story, which, as the name suggests, chronicles the obvious. There are a number of stories that fall into this category and, until I saw the effects of the last snowstorm, I once believed that an article about driving in snowy conditions was a "Take an Umbrella" topic. But based on the number of people I saw stuck in snow banks last week, fenders banged up, SUVs overturned on the highway, wheels spinning ineffectually everywhere, an article about how to drive in snow is clearly needed. We have a few more weeks of winter ahead of us – based on tonight's forecast there's another storm heading our way – so heed the advice below and at least make it look like you know what you're doing when it starts snowing.



The three keys to winter driving are visibility, traction and style. Again, this may all seem obvious – but you're the one in the snow bank, not me.

Visibility: Seeing where you're going will greatly reduce the chance that you'll end up in an accident. The first key to visibility is getting your car cleaned off – that includes all the windows, wipers, mirrors and head and brake lights. While cleaning your car many people will start the car to get it warmed up. There are two things to remember here: idling a cold engine is very bad for the engine and avoid turning on the defroster because you will simply be blowing cold air, laden with moisture onto the inside of the windshield. This will then freeze and you won't be able to see where you're going. Instead have the heater blowing on the floor. It's important to clear the exterior vent intakes of snow on the hood, usually near the wipers, so that you're not blow moist air into the car.

Traction: Just because you're driving an SUV it doesn't mean that you're invincible. On dry pavement the amount of traction you have is substantial, but on snow and ice the amount of traction you have is as much as a tenth of that which you'd have on dry pavement. This means that it can take as much as five or six times the distance that you'd require to stop on dry pavement as opposed to wet pavement. This is why you have to alter your driving style when you're driving in the snow.

Style: This is the most important aspect of driving in the snow – it separates the men from the boys... and the snow banks. The way in which you translate where you're going from the steering wheel and pedals to the tires determines how well you do in the white stuff.

The most important thing to avoid is quick, jerky movements with the wheel or abrupt stops and starts with the pedals. You're aiming to have a smooth ride. Don't over-steer, this will reduce the friction generated between the tires and the road. Look as far down the road as you can and make smooth movements with the wheel. Beginning by turning the wheel slowly and increase the speed of the turn only incrementally and if necessary. It sometimes helps to hold the wheel at nine o'clock and three o'clock, which will help prevent over-steering. Slow and easy wins the race.

When it comes to the pedals the same principals apply – slow and steady. When accelerating you have to apply pressure to the pedal very slowly and only increase your acceleration once the car has started rolling. Each car is different and some cars are more sensitive than others, so learn how your car reacts. If your wheels begin to spin (you'll hear it and feel it) ease back on the accelerator until you regain traction.

The same rules apply to braking. First and foremost, leave a safe – excessive – distance between your car and the car in front of you. When initiating braking, do it very gently and steadily. Even in an emergency situation, use the same principles. More often than not, jamming on your brakes will make you lose control and at that point you have no opportunity to avoid obstacles in front of you.

Also, try and avoid braking while you're turning, or accelerating while turning. By sticking to one movement or action at a time you'll be able to maintain control of your car.

It's that simple: smooth and space and you'll have no problems.

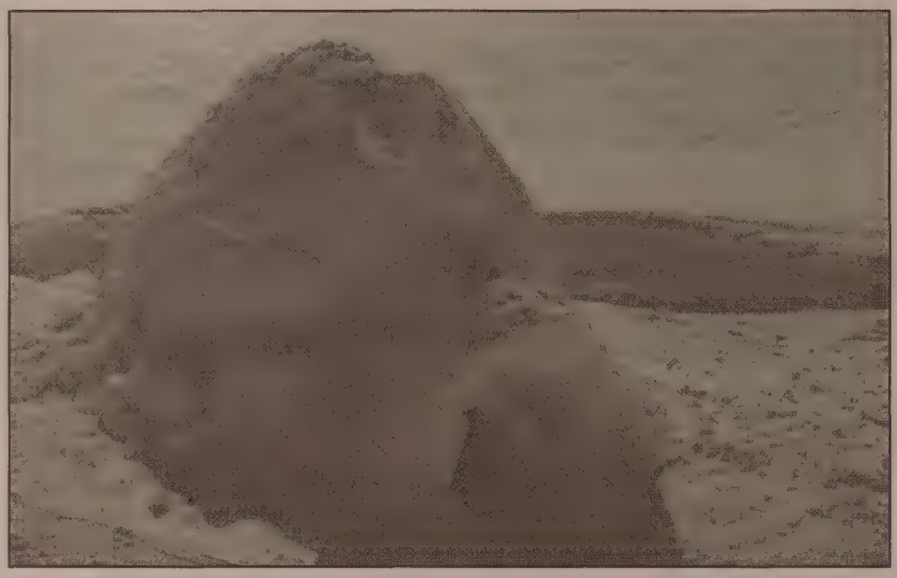
Solving The East End Housing Shortage: Igloos

With real estate prices what they are here on the East End and with a perpetual shortage of affordable housing available, it may be time to turn our attention to shelter alternatives. As accessory apartments continue to meet resistance in town government, and with motels and hotels shuttering their doors to year-round residents, a viable option might be the construction of igloos. Simple, cheap and warm, a nice igloo could solve many housing problems we face here – and, in the event that igloos are deemed unsuitable for long-term winter housing, you can always build one with your kids for fun.

FYI: The word igloo is derived from the Inuit "igdlu," which means house.

You'll need: a saw and a shovel.

As with all real estate, it's location, location, location. You'll need to find a snow field with suitably hard snow. (This shouldn't be a problem right now.) Clear a circular space, ten to fifteen feet in diameter, that will fit two or three adults or multiple kids. Then start cutting blocks.



The blocks will grow progressively smaller as you move from the base to the peak of the igloo. Start by digging a small trench that will allow you to cut blocks of snow approximately 2'x3'. Place these blocks around the base of the circle that you have laid out for the igloo. The blocks should be slanted about fifteen degrees off the vertical. Be aware that the dome doesn't have to be very high because you will also dig down into the snow inside the igloo to create more space.

Continue cutting and stacking blocks of a progressively smaller size until you have just the opening at the top of the igloo to fill. It is easiest to place the last block from inside the igloo. Turn the block on its side and raise it through the hole. Then shape the edges of the block so that it will distribute equal force on all sides. Lower the block into place and you have an igloo.

The finishing touches will make the igloo as nice as home. Fill the cracks around the blocks with snow, leaving on or two cracks open for ventilation. Begin by digging down a few feet on the leeward side of the igloo and then tunnel outwards to create a door. The combination of tunneling and cutting an inverted U-shaped hole in the igloo wall will provide for an acceptable entrance. Don't make it large enough for polar bears to fit through as the animals are hungry and roaming the East End at this time of year.

When the temperature inside the igloo rises it will cause the igloo walls to melt and then refreeze. This continued process will often allow the igloo to become solid ice and last until Memorial Day, and this makes a great place to house the extra house guests who arrive at this time of year.

Actual igloos built by professionals can withstand the weight of a man standing on top of them and they can survive all manner of storms and wind – even a hurricane is no match for a well-built igloo.

After Memorial Day the igloo will melt and you'll have to allow your inlaws into the house. But they'll be appreciative and maybe even bring you a nice gift when they come out for the weekend. –J.M.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face... with Annette

Sleep may be a basic physical need, but we rarely (well adults anyway) get enough. An estimated 100 million Americans suffer from chronic sleep deprivation. Many of us sacrifice sleep in favor of more "pressing" responsibilities, but we end up paying the price in weakened immune systems, concentration, memory difficulties and delayed reactions times. Visible symptoms of sleep deprivations include irritability, anxiety, depression, fatigue, lethargy, poor performance and reductions in physical strength and coordination.

So, how much sleep is enough? While eight hours a day is the statistical average our sleep needs are actually genetically determined and can range from five to ten hours, depending on the individual and his or her age. Research has shown that when healthy adults are allowed to sleep unrestricted, the average time is 8 to 8.5 hours. If the person does not get enough sleep, even on one night, a "sleep debt" begins to build and increases until enough sleep is obtained. Problem sleepiness occurs as the "debt" accumulates. Many people do not get enough sleep during the work week and then sleep longer on the weekends or days off to reduce the "debt." If too much sleep has been lost, sleeping in on the weekend may not completely reverse the effects of not getting enough sleep during the week.

Some things you may look into to help you get a better night's sleep would be to try to keep regular sleep hours. Try to go to bed at the same time each night and rise approximately the same time each morning. Don't read or watch television in bed. Program your body to be ready for rest when you slip between the sheets. Also, don't eat a heavy meal shortly before bedtime. Likewise, don't consume alcohol or caffeine right before bed. Quit smoking! Studies indicate that heavy smokers take longer to fall asleep, awaken more frequently during the night and spend less time in deep sleep which is the most restful.

Exercise, in addition to relieving daily tensions and helping your body relax, can improve the quality of your sleep. The ideal time to exercise for the express purpose of enhanced sleep is in the late afternoon or early evening or at least four hours before you retire for the night. Everyone feels sleepy at times, however, when sleepiness interferes with daily routines and activities or reduces the ability to function, it is called problem sleepiness.

Source: Sharp & Greene Gallup poll

Only 28 percent of us get eight or more hours of sleep per night.

Here are some signs to watch out for: consistently do not get enough sleep or poor quality sleep; fall asleep or want to while driving; struggle to stay awake when inactive, such as watching TV or reading; have difficulty paying attention or concentrating at work, school, or home; have performance problems at work or school; have difficulty remembering; have slowed responses; have difficulty controlling your emotions; take naps on most days.

Each day there are two periods when the body experiences a natural tendency toward sleepiness: during the late night hours (generally between midnight and 7a.m.) and again during the mid-afternoon (generally between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m.). So these are the times to be aware of and to try to find something other than that a strong cup of coffee, which will stay in your system for about 3 to 7 hours. Watch out for that nicotine from cigarettes or the patch if you are trying to quit smoking. Both contain a stimulant and make it harder to fall asleep and stay there once you are there!

Of course there are medical conditions and drugs, including prescription medications that can also interrupt sleep and cause problem sleepiness. Chronic illnesses such as asthma, congestive heart failure, arthritis or any other painful disorder fall into this category. Medicines to treat high blood pressure, heart medications, asthma meds such as theophlline can lead to sleeplessness during the day. Alcohol is also a sedating drug that can, even in small amounts, make a sleepy person much more sleepy, not to mention a greater risk for car crashes and performance problems.

If you try it all to get that successful nights sleep we strive for and fail, you may need to seek medical assistance. Perhaps a gentle sleeping aid to get over the little bump may be all you need in getting your rhythm started. If you decide to do an over the counter type med, read the box/bottle carefully to see if you have any of the listed conditions or to see if any medicine you are presently on would intefer with it's effectiveness.

Police Blotter

A myriad of crimes was reported this past week in the Hamptons; ranging from credit fraud to drug possession and even a case of poorly poured concrete. One incident made more headlines than the corduroy pillow trend of the 1980's. It began when a Water Mill woman called police after being chased inside her house by two aggressive rottweilers. The first officer to arrive at the Wilderness Trail home found a child hiding in a shed and the child's mother in the house. When the officer tried to move the child to the house, he was forced to put him in the police car as one of the dogs approached. With the dog in arm's reach he attempted to read the tag on the collar but was bitten. He was able to free his arm from the dog's grasp and chase the vicious pair away. As the child was returned to the safety of his mother and home, the dogs returned and were again chased off by the police officer. Police couldn't say if they would press charges against the dogs' owner.

Another being on the east end decided to grab a bite last week. Southampton police arrested a 50-year-old Southampton man on Thursday for charging a few meals on a credit card that he had cancelled. The man was charged with unlawful use of a credit card and theft of services.

No more fun and games for an East Quogue resident. He notified police after discovering that someone had pried open the back door of his Spinney Road home with a crowbar. The thief made off with a $300 Playstation 2 video game system and $250 worth of video games. Police have no suspects in this case.

With all the rain, sleet and snow we've had this winter, it's incredible that the mail still gets where it needs to go. You can thank the U.S. Postal service for a job well done. However, a 49-year-old East Hampton woman has her envelopes in a bunch because, according to her, someone's been stealing her mail from her Gardener Avenue mailbox. She reported most of the thefts to the Postmaster but is now seeking police assistance to end this mail madness.

The East Hampton Post Office craziness continued last Wednesday when an East Hampton woman complained to police after she tripped and fell on what she said was and uneven curb. The police department, who apparently watch where they're walking, checked out the area and found no such curbular obstacle.

Dan's Letters

MORE LETTERS LIKE THIS, PLEASE
Dear Dan,

I've been a fan and reading Dan's Papers since the early '80s. Always brings a smile to my face, in fact I recently bought Dan's Shorts and it had me rolling. Your whole staff brings a sense of fresh air to life.

Thanks for your hard work

WHAT THE EEL IS GOING ON?
Dear Dan,

I have been living in Italy for the past five years and read your paper online every week. I seem to remember a story or two about the Ecuadorian eel appearing in the Hamptons years ago. I can't believe it is back! I thought your staff caught it on the ocean beach in Bridgehampton? Is this an offspring?

Please get to the bottom of it, I can't imagine the trouble with all the tourists and New York City part-time residents not knowing how to deal with it. Maybe that's why it is back. Too many people on the East End. Lot's of food for him.

When I left East Hampton five years or so ago, I thought it was over. It's like reliving the return of Jaws...

I will keep on reading hoping it will be gone before summer.

Love the paper, always did, always will.

I hope to visit soon, but not until it's gone for good!

Peace on the East End.

Regina Mancusi,
Sorrento, Italy

We'll get that eel. –D.R.

WHO'S RIGHT?
Dear Dan,

The anti-war demonstrations which took place throughout the United States as well as the entire world, with millions of people marching and protesting the imminent Bush war, brought to mind an old analogy: The proud mother, who upon watching her Johnny marching in a parade said, "Oh, look at my Johnny marching so wonderfully, and just look at all the other marchers. They're so dumb. Every one of them is out of step."

DEBRIEFING DAN
Dear Dan,

I have two brief comments regarding your recent article entitled "George Bush as a Sherman Tank." First, the Israelis attacked the Iraqi nuclear plant at Osirak in 1981, not 1971. Ironically, the Israeli astronaut on the Columbia flew on that mission. Secondly, you note that no president has spoken in such terms as Mr. Bush since FDR. One must note that FDR was the US president when the United States was last attacked (Pearl Harbor) before 9/11. Even that attack involved a military installation on a US territory as opposed to a civilian target in the Continental US.

Dear Dan,

Hi. Is this week's story about the eel attack for real? It is the most unbelievable thing I have read in a long time. Please let me know.

Thanks.

Karen
Via email

P.S. Love your paper.

Not real. A hoax. –D.R.

GOTCHA
Dear Dan,

After reading your riveting account of the deer hunter who was saved from a giant Ecuadorian eel by a mannequin deliveryman, I was this close to taking the bait. Are you celebrating April Fools Day early this year?

Keep up the good work.

Ed O'Malley
Bronx
Via Email

Yup. –D.R.

GOTCHA AGAIN
Dear Dan,

Now wait a minute Dan. I know you have a witty sense of humor and sometimes you write with a "tongue-in-cheek" style, but is this article true? You are kidding right? I saw no indications from the article that you were joking. If this is true, shouldn't this be a major news item across the big networks? Oh yea, I forgot the networks are busy reporting about how American companies are bypassing trade tariffs by importing electronic products and services over the internet. No wait, they can't do that. It might make people think. It's better if they look at Saddam's latest snappy suit.

Anyway, can you please print a little follow-up and tell us if the Quick Thinking article was a true story.

Dennis Butler
Via email

Nope. Not true. –D.R.

OLD CANDY FOR ALL
Dear Dan,

Let's Save Penny Candy in Watermill. It is too special to lose! Please help preserve one of the last old-fashioned treasures left in the Hamptons.

The Penny Candy brings the spirit of the old fashioned to hearts that seek it. It is almost going to be gone if we do not try and SAVE it! The owner plans to sell it and who knows what it may become. We do not need another restaurant or any modern candy shop.

We need to save the original Penny Candy today! Thanks!
